To do justice to Shannon Tweed, the June 1982 cover unfolded to reveal a full-length view. It would have been a crime to confine our tallest Playmate in less space. Shannon's March 1985 cover previewed what the reader would find inside: a pictorial devoted to lingerie modeled by Playmates of the Year Shannon, Monique St. Pierre, Marianne Gravatte and Barbara Edwards.

We knew we could count on Bo Derek, the woman who brought new meaning to the number ten. She'll always be number one in our book, and we proved it four times. Tarzan the Apeman and Bolero didn't fare well at the box office, but Bo ignited the pages of PLAYBOY in pictorials that prefaced the premiers of those films. Here are a few reminders of why Bo is rated so highly.

Hollywood starlet Terry Moore appeared on more than 30 magazine covers in the Forties and Fifties. Her secret marriage to Howard Hughes 35 years ago was short-lived, but she says he was the love of her life. The liaison resulted in an undisclosed settlement from his estate—"somewhere between five and eight figures." Terry's figure is somewhere between perfection and paradise.

Come on in, the water is fine, was the message imparted by December 1984 Playmate Karen Velez on the May 1985 cover. In that issue, palm trees, white sand and crystal blue water formed the exotic backdrop for erotic photos of Karen shot on location in Tahiti for the Playmate of the Year pictorial. Karen's sarong spread raised more than a few eyebrows. Soon after, we booked Karen for a return engagement as model for the cover of the Premier Edition of Playboy's Playmate Review special. Karen isn't a stranger to tropical climates, having grown up primarily in Florida. Relax, Rico, it's not a vice to look—even in Miami.

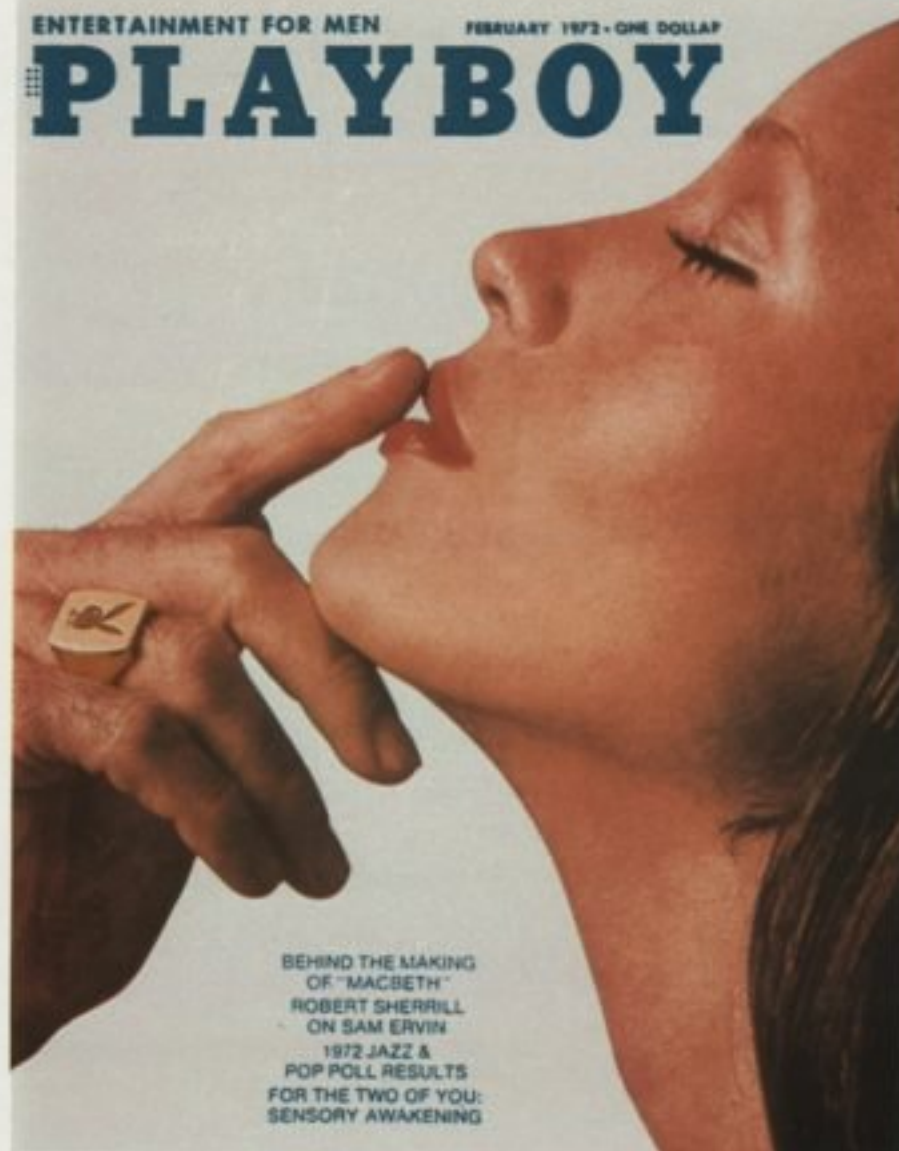

A first-class cover was essential to introduce our pictorial on stewardesses in the May 1980 issue. Terri Welles, a flight attendant for United Airlines, was the answer to our prayers when she agreed to try her wings as a cover girl. Her career reached new heights as our December 1980 centerfold. Not shown here is the February 1981 cover that Terri shared with 25th Anniversary Playmate Candy Loving and July 1977 gatefold Sondra Theodore. All three claim the title of Playmate of the Year. They also shared the rent, inspiring a feature on Playmate roommates. Terri moved from modeling to acting, but she debuted in PLAYBOY—dramatically.

Someone once said Barbara Carrera could make blue-eyed blondes obsolete. The exotic Latin adorned the covers of Vogue, Cosmopolitan, Harper's Bazaar and PLAYBOY (February 1972) before turning her myriad talents to cinema. Her name has appeared on the marquis with Rock Hudson in Embryo and with Peter O'Toole in Masada. Her performance with Burt Lancaster in The Island of Doctor Moreau inspired an evocative pictorial in our July 1977 issue. Her indefinable accent is difficult to trace to her native Nicaragua—perhaps because she speaks five languages fluently. Carrera is a poetess, painter, model, actress and a sensuous woman.

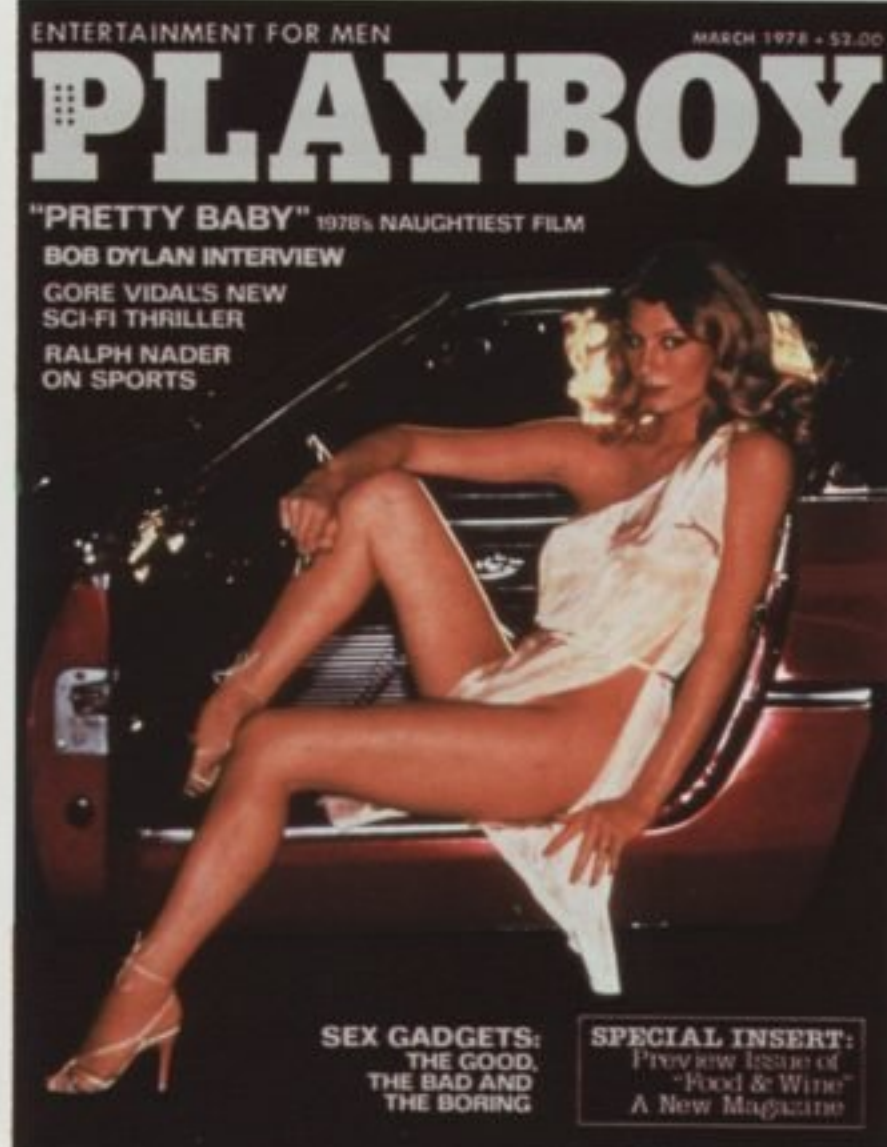

Charlotte Kemp is a head turner and a traffic stopper, and if the issue is redheads, Charlotte must be a part of it. That was the case when the December 1982 Playmate appeared on the cover of an issue featuring a pictorial aptly titled Reds. We couldn't start the revolution without her, but who'd want to? It was manifest destiny. As demonstrated by the October 1983 cover, that rabbit finds himself in some pretty enviable places. One of Charlotte's favorite places is several thousand feet up. She likes to keep her head in the clouds—literally. Flight instruction has enabled her to take to the skies, but last we heard she was getting ready to bail out. The next falling star you see could possibly be a sky-diving Charlotte. You're supposed to make a wish on such an occasion and we've anticipated yours: more spectacular photos of Charlotte on the next five pages.

Does this woman make your motor race? If not, we suggest you have your vital signs checked. Debra Jensen told us that one day she needed half a dollar for gas to get home (this took place in 1977). She stopped a guy coming out of the Playboy Building who got down on his knees, kissed her feet and said, "I'll give you 50 cents if you'll agree to be the January Playmate." It was an offer she couldn't refuse. She appeared as the January 1978 Playmate and was cover model for the March 1978 and 1979 issues. We think you'll agree with our assessment: few things in this world are more attractive than Debra Jensen idling in a Ferrari.

The Pulitzer divorce trial scandalized Palm Beach high society and the tabloids trumpeted tales of Roxanne Pulitzer's allegedly lurid love life. The newspaper accounts began to sound like a Harold Robbins novel. In our June 1985 issue, Foxy Roxy revealed her side (and a little more) to PLAYBOY readers in a funny, tongue-in-cheek portrayal of what goes on behind those posh portals.

Cyndi Wood has appeared on four PLAYBOY covers. Even though she played a supporting role to the rabbit for our 20th Anniversary issue, Cyndi stole the show and the Bunny's bow tie on the second cover (inset). In a snappy salute to our nation's bicentennial, Cyndi contributed generously to the patriotic fervor with her glorious depiction of Lady Liberty. It was a spirited '76.

Judging by the number of hearts stolen away by Patti McGuire's Irish eyes, she's guilty of grand larceny. We've given our readers ample opportunity to admire our perennial favorite, but there's no such thing as enough when it comes to Patti.

She was the fetching focal point of our February 1979 cover. Her remarkable eyes adorned our February 1980 cover. And our eyes adore Candace Collins, December 1979 Playmate, from Dupon, Illinois. Candace was perhaps a smidgen too sophisticated for Dupon. She moved on to nearby St. Louis and a job at the Playboy Club, then to the Chicago Club where she was named Chicago Bunny of the Year. The small-town girl found herself in big demand for modeling assignments in such cosmopolitan places as Barcelona, Rome and the Big Apple. She may be the record holder among poster models, having posed for eight when we last counted.

INSIDE STORY OF

A RACY
INTERVIEW
GEORGE BURNS

Debra Jo Fondren can only be dubbed the hair apparent. Her crowning glory cascades down her back, proclaiming her undeniable femininity. Francis Giacobetti, director of Emmanuelle, photographed Debra in his Paris studio to achieve the painterly qualities that characterized her Playmate of the Year pictorial. The Parisians were so intrigued, they stopped her on the street to touch her hair, and eventually, she tucked the magnificent mane inside her coat to avoid all the attention. We've focused on all of Debra's attributes. She comes from Beaumont, Texas, where everything grows like wildfire and hair is a two-syllable word.

Susie Scott is a paradox. Her favorite foods are flying-fish roe with raw quail eggs and peanut-butter-and-jelly sandwiches. She's an outdoor girl who loves to fiddle with computers. She's impossible to categorize, so we won't try—we'll just provide the data. Susie runs four or five miles before breakfast and doesn't worry about calories. She's a vegetarian who spends hours each day at hard physical play such as horseback riding and cross-country skiing. For her May 1983 Playmate picture story, she obliged the photographer by hanging off a steep rockface on a rope. Susie has programmed her software to achieve marvelous results.

A Playboy Bunny Hunt in the Dallas–Fort Worth area caused Karen Christy's ears to perk up and opened our eyes to her many charms. When she accepted an invitation to become a cottontail at the Chicago Club, she needed a place to live. The Playboy Mansion opened its doors and Karen moved into the Bunny dorm, providing the title for Karen's December 1971 gatefold: Resident Beauty. Karen was the model for the provocative July 1973 cover; in our book, V is for vivacious.

There are some people you never tire of seeing. Rita Lee, for instance, appeared on PLAYBOY covers in three consecutive years. The November 1977 Playmate exhibited remarkable versatility. She was sultry and sophisticated in January 1978, sexy and seductive in April 1979, cute and collegiate in September 1980. The ravishing brunette demonstrates other qualities that need no description.

The glitter that surrounded Farrah Fawcett wasn't fool's gold. Despite the hype, the dolls, posters and fan clubs, she did not rest on her proverbial laurels. She won the critics' acclaim for her brilliant performance in The Burning Bed, the television docudrama about an abused wife. The fair-haired wonder won rave reviews from our readers for this celebrated December 1978 cover.

As a Christmas gift to our readers, the first cover to incorporate both sides of the page featured both sides of Sheralee Connors, way back in December 1962. The photos opposite illustrate how the present looked when unwrapped. These days, video Playmates may be seen from all sides on the PLAYBOY channel, and one day you might find a holographic Playmate under your tree. We'll keep you posted on any progress in that dimension. In the meantime, July 1961 centerfold Sheralee is worth a second or third look, even without the help of modern technology.

Norwegian Lillian Müller was modeling in London when she caught the attention of a PLAYBOY photographer. Next stop: the August 1975 gatefold and Playmate of the Year 1976. Lillian has appeared in more than two dozen TV shows and several films. She took time out from her latest, Stewardess School—for which she has changed her name to Yuliis Ruval—to pose for our front cover.

We first uncovered Kymberly Herrin as the March 1981 Playmate. The Santa Barbara beauty has a penchant for pets, in particular, a parrot named Paco who says, "C'mere, baby." She toots a mean flute and is an avid scuba diver and surfer. Both the September 1982 and 1983 covers are tributes to Kym's athletic attributes. The mere thought of a workout with Kym constitutes a warm-up.

On the occasion of PLAYBOY's Tenth Anniversary issue, Donna Michelle congratulated the celebrated rabbit with a kiss in an innovative three-page cover. Her heart-shaped beauty mark formed the pupil in the bunny's die-cut eye. The decade had made a lasting impression and so did Donna. Even her lipstick was indelible. A limber body was a prerequisite to posing in the shape of a Bunny for the May 1964 cover. Donna, once a member of the New York City Ballet, was capable of such a stretch of imagination. Although we left little to the imagination in Donna's Playmate of the Year pictorial in the same issue, it is the stuff that dreams are made of.
